SUNDAY SCHOOL ATTENDANCE GROWN IN STATE

"There are probably from forty to fifty thousand more persons attending Sunday schools in Kentucky than ever before," Rev. George A. Joplin, general secretary of the Kentucky Sunday School Association said in discussing the outlook for the year 1922. The workers of the State organization have undertaken with the coming of the new year, he said, to add 100,000 more to the rolls by "Go-To-Sunday-School Sunday" May 7th.

"During the war," said Mr. Joplin, "in Kentucky, as in most of the States, there was a decrease in the enrollment of Sunday schools of the State. However, this decrease was small as compared with other States."

"While great effort is being made to add to the number attending Sunday school, still greater effort is being put forth to improve the teaching in the Sunday schools. In many towns of the States there are community training classes for the teachers, federations of adult classes and officers associations that met from month to month and make plans for more efficient service."

"County conventions will be held in different counties and schools of method will be held next summer, which will be attended by thousands of Sunday school workers of the State."
